- During the period prior to World War II, the foodstuffs industries in Bulgaria had developed to a point where they were nearly adequate for the needs of the population. At that time there were mills, oil factories, sugar factories, meat processing factories, and canning factories. These industries suffered a great deal of damage during the war.
- After 1944 the Bulgarian government nationalized all existing industries and took measures to repair the damages suffered by the factories during the war. However, the foodstuffs industries at present in operation are the same ones which existed prior to 1939.
- The foodstuffs industries consist of the factories as listed in the chart below and shown in the Appendix on pages 4 and 5.
